

READS HUMAN THOUGHTS
GREAT HUMAN PUZZLE
DOES SUCH SINGULAR THINGS THAT CALLERS LOOK UPON HIM AS A VISITOR FROM AN UNDISCOVERED WORLD.

Mr. Keller, the world's marvelous clairvoyant, has astonished Janesville. This celebrated German gentleman has amazed our people. He does such things as were never done before. He can read the human thought as a teacher reads a book. There is nothing in the breast of man that can be kept from him. Think what you will and Mr. Keller will instantly tell you what it is about.

"What does he do, anyway?" the reader is now prepared to ask. "What doesn't he do?" is about the best response that can be made.

Without asking questions, he tells the caller all about himself or herself, as the case may be. He will tell a person his parent's name when he has never been told them by any person living.

A husband and wife had become estranged. There was no real reason for it, as there seldom is; but soon after it had been a separation. One of them told the case before Mr. Keller. The husband and wife have had a glorious reunion. The clouds of discord have been dispelled. There is sunshine in that home today. Happy tranquility has taken the place of turbulence, and is worth a good deal at that. The discordant habitation. The transgression could not be rewarded and heartfelt gratitude alone can settle that account.

An engagement of marriage had been broken. There was a very unhappy woman on the one hand and a not too delighted young man on the other. Each had a hand in that breach, and both ought to have been soundly spanked. But the infliction of punishment did not come. Mr. Keller brought the separated ones together, the sacred contract has been renewed, and a home is being prepared for a bride and groom. Each has seen the error that caused them to drift apart. Their eyes are opened now, and who was it that caused them to see? This intently arrived wizard, who appears to be able to do all things.

Mr. Keller claims the power to peer into the future too, and there seems to be no doubt but that he can. Why should it not be just as easy to read the coming events as to describe those that had passed into eternity, of which the gentleman had no knowledge? There seems no difference at all. Many believe that he can do this, and scores are the callers at his parlors, New Myers Hotel, Parlor C, seeking information concerning what the future has in store for them. "This they are told without the slightest hesitation, and all depart absolutely satisfied at what they have seen and heard."

Mr. Keller belongs to a new class of clairvoyants, or astrologers, as he prefers to be known. He is proud of his profession and guards its sacredness with jealous care. He is perfectly confident, too, that in his exalted calling there are impostors by the score, and this seems to annoy him most of all. His one great desire and ambition is to elevate his profession so that there may be attracted to it the "honorable" of the world, and in this he has most admirably succeeded with himself. His life is one of purity and his habits above reproach. He is a man of culture and rare attainments, and Mrs. Keller is a lady qualified to grace the best of homes.

So conscientious is the gentleman that he absolutely declines to accept any fee in advance for any service he may render, and not unless the caller is satisfied in every way. But he does nothing by this system of transmuting business, because all are satisfied. He is as bright as a dollar and as pleasant as a sunbeam. There is not a sign of trickery about his whole being. He obviously possesses the integrity of a leader, and the fidelity of a prince of his chosen vocation.

TOO MANY HALT OUTSIDE GATES OF KINGDOM OF HEAVEN, SAID REV. TIPPET.

SURRENDER YOUR LIFE
To Jesus and Receive the Blessing of God—Last Step into Heaven is to Become as Little Children.

At the Carroll Memorial Methodist church Sunday morning Rev. J. H. Tippet preached a particularly strong and eloquent sermon, choosing for a subject, "Not Far From Thy Kingdom." The text is taken from the twelfth chapter of the Gospel according to the Apostle Mark, and the thirty-fourth verse.

"What was the significance of these words, 'not far from Thy Kingdom,' said Rev. Tippet. Jesus did not mean the celestial universe, nor did He speak of the political dynasty for which the Jews hoped. No, it was neither of these, but of a world within us that He spoke. Jesus meant the sovereignty of God, established in men's minds, consciences and in their everyday life. He says here that the scribe was not far from the Kingdom of God, or the godliness of living a divine life.

Why is it that the flowers are so sweet in the spring; why is it that the sky seems to be so glorious? The splendor of the sky and the beauty of the flowers are because every atom of them is all obedient to the divine law. Jesus says that the scribe was not far from the Kingdom. He was not far from it, but he was not yet in the Kingdom. Why was it? He had religious susceptibilities. He was a good man, yet why was he not within? He probably was an intellectual man. Was it because he did not have enough knowledge? No, knowledge would only help him in gaining entrance to the Kingdom. You cannot think too deeply on religious matters. We may think that ignorance is a better guarantee of salvation than knowledge but a deep study helps us to understand.

Moral integrity is another way of gaining admittance into the Kingdom. The scribe was a man of moral character and integrity. I often think that we have a mistaken notion that the bigger scamp a man can be, the better are his chances of salvation. We imagine that his character will be stronger than that of the righteous man because he can be iniquitous and overcome his sins and become a Christian. The realization of virtue, however, is not secured by vice. You can see the heavens reflected in a mud puddle, but if you speak a star in the puddle you make a mistake. Keep yourself clean and true. Be honorable. There is no way to the highest except through the best.

Men and women, if you seek the blessing of God, you can get it by lifting up your heart to God. You will get faith and strength from Him. If you recede from Him, you are the Kingdom of Heaven reached; by a study of the sacred book; by regular attendance at church, whether you feel that you are in the Kingdom or are not far from it as the scribe was.

Lots of men are loitering near to the Kingdom, but do not get within the gates. Wesley sought at Epworth and Oxford that he might become imbued with the Spirit and thence imbued across the sea to Georgia, but did not find it there and only when at it did it come in his brother's house, when he read the preface to the Homilies, written by Luther was read, that he first felt the glow of the Spirit within him.

By various ways men come into the Kingdom of Heaven. Some enter through a deep study of the word; some by moral integrity, and others by ecclesiastical loyalty.

The most important step a man takes is not his first step. You may come a long way to secure God's blessing, but if you don't take the last step you travel in vain. I do not know how thick the gate of Heaven is, but it makes a vast difference whether a man is inside or outside of it. Men fall in that one thing of taking the last step into the Kingdom of Jesus and because of that are shut out. Men and women, there is a tremendous gulf between finishing and almost finishing. So much depends on the last step. Do not stop short of being a real Christian. Be sure and go all the way, so that when the King comes you will not be found wanting.

Why do men stop short when they have almost attained that which they seek? It is for fear of just one thing. If you wish to secure the blessing of Life just surrender your life to Jesus Christ.

Jesus says that unless you become as little children you shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Become as children that you may enter into the Kingdom of God.

What a splendid thing it is for us that salvation is not dependent on something great. For us, who could not do some great intellectual or philanthropic thing, the Gate of Heaven would not be unlocked.

Some have lingered without the Gate too long. Just surrender your heart to Him and joy will come to your life.

Cast your vote at the polls tomorrow.

NEW CREW AT WORK ON THE SEWER MAIN

Twenty-Three Austrians From Chicago Started at Work on Western Ave in Place of Strikers.
The crew of Austrians working on the sewer, who struck for higher wages last week and were refused them, left town this morning and the twenty-three men ordered from Chicago took up the work in their places. It was anticipated that the arrival of the new men might cause a row, but the strikers were very peaceable and quiet. The boy Joe, who was so badly beaten up, is again working. The old crew go from here to Chicago, same to Clinton, Iowa, and others to Montana. The new gang are from a different province in Austria and speak a different patois, quite noticeable to those who have been working with the other crew. Three of the men who were working with the strikers have asked for their jobs and as they are good workers, will be allowed to remain. The new set of men are established in the quarters occupied by their predecessors in the old blacksmith shop on the corner of Western avenue and Center avenue. This morning Ryan & Finley commenced the laying of sewer tile on Linn street. There are four blocks of eight-inch tile to be laid here, running from Holmes street and connecting with the main sewer at Western avenue. Their present force is twelve men, but by the middle of the week thirteen more will be added.

Besides this work and the job on the main sewer, which will require until August to finish at the present rate of progress, there are a thousand feet of the twenty-seven inch size to be put down on River street, twelve hundred feet of fifteen-inch pipe on Jackson street, and two blocks of eight-inch tile to be laid on the same street; about four blocks of sewer pipe on Lincoln street, will be put down, from High street to Western avenue, and about five blocks of pipe will be laid on Locust street. After the main sewer is finished to River street, it will have to be connected with the manhole at the west end of the line across the river.

The trench now is being dug through sand, which necessitates that the sides be strengthened with sheet piling. To put in this sheet piling is a tedious process which takes considerable time on account of the depth of the trench, twenty-one feet, and the absolute necessity of the workers in the trench. The digging has not been much delayed because since the first of March there has not been enough frost in the ground to hinder work. The trenches of the main sewer are about four feet below the water level of the river and there is a constant seepage into the trench keeping the pipe-layers working in about sixteen inches of water most of the time.

STRONG REASONS FOR THE VOTERS.

Things to Be Remembered on Next Tuesday.
To the Voters of Janesville:
The contract between the Electric Light company and the City of Janesville for lighting the streets of the city expires one year from this spring. A mayor is to be elected this spring for a term of two years and so the mayor elected next Tuesday will be in office when the contract with the Electric Light company for the next five years is made. This contract, on the basis of the contract for the past five years amounts to more than four thousand dollars a year. The question arises who the voters and citizens of Janesville want in the office of mayor, to look out for their interests when such contract is made.

Do the voters want one of the family of the five gentlemen who own the Electric Light plant?

And further, an interurban street railway franchise is to be acted upon by our common council in the near future, the feature of the proposed franchise is a provision with respect to electric power.

The franchise should not contain a provision restricting the interurban company from establishing an electric power plant within our city, but should contain a provision permitting such company to furnish itself power and to compete with the Janesville Electric company in furnishing the city of Janesville its electric lights and the people of Janesville their light and power service.

Such a provision would be in the interest of lower taxes and a lower rate for light to consumers.

The mayor should be elected who will best safeguard the interests of taxpayers in these respects and I believe John C. Nichols is the candidate who will protect the people's interests.

THOMAS EMMERTON HAS UNIQUE PLAN TO FIGHT THE TRUSTS.

Madison, Wis.—Thomas Emmerton of Hesper, president of the Wisconsin Society of Equity, believes the only method to curb the trusts is for the farmers to have a trust of their own. He has started at the task. During the past year the society refused to sell the tobacco raised and owned by the members for less than a certain price. The tobacco clubs backed, but Emmerton had tobacco sheds built in southwestern Wisconsin where the tobacco of the members was pooled and boxed ready for sale. The insurance companies insured the tobacco against losses by fires and after some delay, the bankers loaned money upon the tobacco in the pool as security. Nearly all of last year's crop has been sold from the pool at "from 2 to 6 cents more a pound than could ordinarily have been received," according to Mr. Emmerton. Another tobacco pool was formed this year.

The society recently held a convention here and decided to go a step further. A $100,000 packing house will be built in Southern Wisconsin where the meats will be stored and when the "hulls" and the "bones" attempt to force the market down the meats will be placed in cold storage until a price sufficiently high has been restored. Grain elevators will be erected and Emmerton's idea is to have all the farming products of the state sold in this manner. The society is willing and anxious to sell to consumers, for their efforts are directed to eliminate the middleman and the commission merchant, or make them be content with a reasonable profit. Emmerton is a farmer and is reputed to be worth several millions.

The marriage of San Francisco girl to Japanese house boy stirs the whole state.

Mrs. John Emery, her daughter, Mrs. Gunjiro Aoki and Gunjiro Aoki.

San Francisco, Cal.—Miss Helen Gladys Emery has at last married Gunjiro Aoki, the Japanese house boy in the Emery house, after the most stirring criticism—a criticism which has been state-wide.

The mother, Mrs. John Emery, approved of the marriage, while her husband, Archdeacon Emery of the Episcopal church, was bitterly opposed. As soon as Mrs. Emery found that her daughter loved Aoki—and there is no question but that she does—she at once resigned herself to the conditions and not only approved of their marriage, but strongly urged it. In her efforts to win over the father's approval she wrote to her son, endeavoring to call his aid to his sister's marrying Aoki. His brief, laconic reply was as follows:

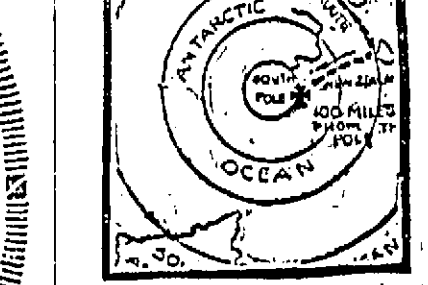

"Dear Mother—You know how I love a nigger—Charles."

Archdeacon Emery will not sanction the marriage and this has caused a rupture between himself and wife, for she has stayed by the daughter through thick and thin and has gone with Mr. and Mrs. Aoki away from San Francisco, where the criticism became so heated that the three could no longer live in peace.

About a week ago the young men of Miss Emery's acquaintance decided to run Aoki out of the town, but the Japanese burned off their intentions.

Lieutenant Shackleton and map showing his successful antarctic trip. He went to within 111 miles of the south pole, the farthest south ever reached by man.

London.—Lieutenant Shackleton has called his safe return from his trip to the south pole. During the trip he covered 1,700 miles on sledge and this occupied 124 days.

Lieutenant Shackleton was with a former antarctic expedition. Profiting by former experiences in the antarctic regions, when all the dogs succumbed to the strain and rigors of the climate, Lieutenant Shackleton made some departures from the usual preparations for a journey across the snow and ice.

He took with him a motor car which could be converted into a sled, and substituted pants for dogs, and light woolen clothing for heavy furs.

But is He?
When a man pawns his watch he probably believes that he is making good use of his time.

GAS PROBE IS NOW DEMANDED

CITY ATTORNEY HAS FILED COMPLAINT AGAINST RATES.

COUNCIL MEETS TONIGHT

And Will Probably Take Action on This and a Number of Other Important Matters.

It is expected that the common council will muster a quorum for the adjourned meeting this evening, and one of the matters which will come up for consideration will be a communication filed by City Attorney Maxfield a week ago in which he asks for authority to file with the state commission a complaint against the rates charged by the New Gas Light Co. and the quality of the gas furnished to consumers, coupled with a request that a full investigation be made by that body of the sort of service furnished here and the prices charged therefor. The claim is put forth that Janesville people are paying $1.50 for gas that is furnished for from $1 to $1.25 in other cities of the same size.

Water Case Not Decided
As the result of a clerical error in the office at Madison, a hearing of the case of the City of Janesville vs. the Janesville Water Co. was placed on the commission's calendar for the 10th of April and City Attorney Maxfield received a notice to that effect from Secretary J. W. Whitebourn on Saturday. He immediately made inquiries over the telephone and learned that the commission had not yet passed on the question of its jurisdiction while the case was argued at Madison some weeks ago, and was not likely to do so until some Milwaukee cases, now being argued, are disposed of. A decision that it has this jurisdiction and that certain agreements made between Janesville and the Water Co. under the charter, are no longer binding, will constitute a virtual victory for the city.

Those Saloon Licenses
Even were they disposed to do so, the aldermen will not be able to take final action this evening regarding the revocation of the Milwaukee and Union House saloon licenses. The only move possible at this time will be the passage of an order directing one of the constables to serve summons on saloon-keepers named in the city attorney's complaint to appear before the council, within not less than three days or more than ten days, and show cause why their permits should not be vacated. In case the council passes such an order tonight, the hearing will probably be set for next Monday evening, at which time the next regular meeting is to be held.

Proposed Milk Ordinance
The fate of the proposed milk ordinance is a matter of some speculation and the whole question of the relation of local tuberculosis to the milk industry which human beings may have to be thrashed out before any action is taken. Those who, out of sympathy with the dairymen or fearing a raise in the price of milk, contend that the measure should not pass, claim that they have the testimony of eminent authorities to the effect that only a small percentage of human tuberculosis is traceable to milk and that the state law which compels an inspection of any suspicious herd to which attention is directed, is sufficient anyway. On the other hand, Health Officer C. C. Waudin's convictions in support thereof, provide a strong affirmative argument. City Attorney Maxfield has been making some inquiries and has received the following letter from Prof. V. A. Moore, head of the department of pathology and bacteriology of the New York State Veterinary department of Cornell University at Ithaca, N. Y.:

H. L. Maxfield,
Janesville, Wis.

Dear Sir:—
Dr. Kelly has asked me to write you relative to the tubercle bacilli in milk. We have found it occasionally in mixed milk of badly infected herds and also in milk of individual cows on which the studies are affected with tuberculosis. I have no knowledge of tuberculosis existing in the flesh of cattle, but we have one or two specimens where there is a case in which I would refer you to Bulletin 41 of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., for the known facts relating to tubercle bacilli in milk.

Yours truly,
V. A. MOORE.

Interurban Franchise

There appears to be no organized opposition to the proposed franchise to the Chequamegon Construction Co. for an interurban road connecting this city with Madison, though there is some difference of opinion regarding a suggested amendment limiting the number of cars which can be hauled through the city in one train. In some quarters it is claimed that this and allied questions, under the new law, are all "up to" the railway commission. The franchise will probably be given its first and second readings tonight and the debate will take place when it comes up for final action at the next meeting.

Wheeler to Withdraw
Attorney W. G. Wheeler, who was appointed by the council some years ago to assist in presenting the city's defense in the action brought by Contractors Hanrahan & Lindquist to recover $14,000 for alleged sewer "extras," will tonight ask permission to withdraw from the case owing to his forthcoming removal to Milwaukee. The action will be tried in circuit court this month and whether or not the aldermen will appoint anyone else to assist the city attorney remains to be seen. Engineer C. V. Kersch will be the city's star witness. If he is rejected his services will supposedly be gratis, though he might make his own terms as an expert witness in any other case.

DEATH HAS TAKEN THEIR THIRD CHILD

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Valentine Will Arrive Here at Midnight With Remains of Infant Son.

The many Janesville friends of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Valentine who wished them, in a far country, a measure of happiness which might to some degree tone for past tribulations, were inexpressibly shocked and grieved when the tidings came that death had for the third time crossed the threshold of their home and taken away their only child. John Melville Valentine, age fifteen months, died after a brief illness at Pawhuska, Oklahoma, at an early hour Sunday morning, and the remains were received by the grandparents, A. M. Valentine, the bereaved parents and Rollin Lewis, who met them in the Oklahoma city, have already started for Janesville with the remains, and will arrive here at midnight. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon and will be private.

POINTER NO. 2

Turn Down Pointer No. 2 on the Democratic Ticket and Elect Frank L. Smith as City Clerk.

One last reason for the election of Frank L. Smith as city clerk may be brought out as a final argument for his election tomorrow.

Frank L. Smith is fitted for the position he seeks. This is a most important consideration. Ask yourself if you would care to place your business in the hands of a man who is not fitted. You would not and the city's business is every bit as important as your own.

No one ever buys an inferior grade of goods and pays the same money as they do for a first class article. If this be true then there is no reason why Frank L. Smith should not be elected as city clerk tomorrow.

Janesville is a big corporation doing business on a large scale. The city clerkship is the most responsible position in the city government. It needs an expert in accounting, an expert in bookkeeping and a man whose ability is known and recognized.

These are matters of fact, not theory. Mr. Smith, if elected, can fill the office properly. He is an accountant. He is a bookkeeper of known ability and withal that he is a citizen of Janesville of long standing and knows the needs and requirements of the municipality.

Voters will make no mistake tomorrow when they pull down POINTER NO. 2 ON THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET AT THE TOP LINE OF THE VOTING MACHINE AND CAST THEIR BALLOT FOR FRANK L. SMITH FOR CITY CLERK.

Mr. Voter, consider carefully the qualifications of the two candidates for this important office and then vote for the best man. The man best fitted for the place, best qualified by experience, the man who can do justice to the office he seeks, is Frank L. Smith.

Office of City Clerk, March 29, 1909

Information to Voters in Regard to the Election to Be Held on April 6, 1909

DIRECTIONS FOR VOTING ON THE VOTING MACHINE: 1st. Close the curtain. 2d. Pull the Yellow Lever having on it the names of your political party over to the right until the Bell rings. (This will turn down the Pointers over the names of the candidates in your party.) 3d. If you wish to vote a Straight Party Ticket, leave the Pointers as they are (Down, in their voting position). But if you wish to "split," or "scratch," your ticket, turn Up the Pointer from over the name of the candidate in your own party that you wish to cut out, and then turn Down the Pointer over the name of the candidate you wish to vote for, and leave it there. 4th. Vote for the Judges and State Superintendent of Schools in columns No. 15 and higher, by turning down a Pointer over each name you wish to vote for, and leaving it there. (As these are non-partisan officers, they must each be voted for individually, as their Pointers are not turned down by the pulling of the Party Levers.) 5th. Open the Curtain. NOTE:—Unless you are sure that you know just how to operate the machine, it would be well for you to practice on some machine before election day.

HOW TO VOTE ON THE U. S. STANDARD VOTING MACHINE.

Move the Red Handle of the Curtain Lever to the right as far as it will go. This will close the Curtain around you, and unlock the machine for voting.

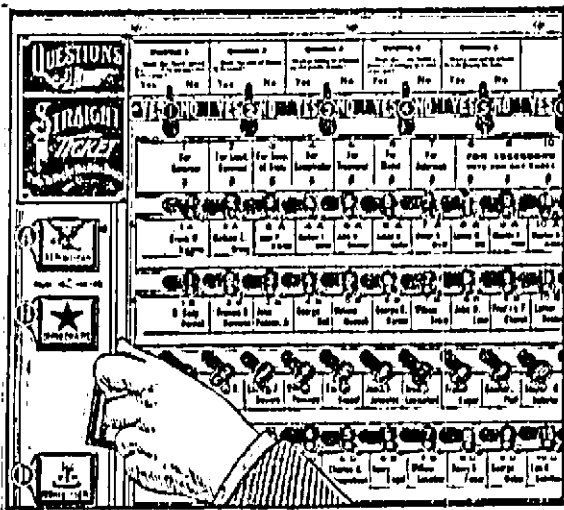

VOTER ABOUT TO CLOSE THE CURTAIN.

HOW TO VOTE A STRAIGHT TICKET.

Having closed the Curtain—Pull the Party Lever bearing the name or emblem of your Party over to the right UNTIL THE BELL RINGS, and then let it go back. This turns down to a voting position all of the Pointers of the candidates of your party.

The ringing of the bell signifies that the Party Lever has been pulled far enough to unlock the Curtain Lever and engage the registering mechanism.

VOTER PULLING OVER PARTY LEVER.

The turned down Pointers indicate the names of the candidates for whom the vote will be cast.

Leave the Pointers as they are (down in a voting position).

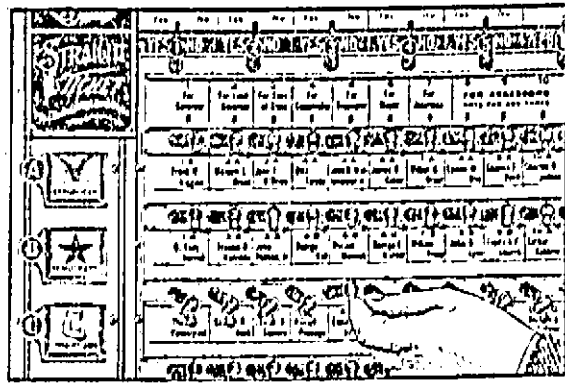

Move the Red Handle of the Curtain Lever to the left as far as it will go.

This will count your vote, open the Curtain, and set the machine for the next voter.

HOW TO VOTE A SPLIT TICKET.

Having closed the Curtain—Pull the Party Lever bearing the name or emblem of your Party over to the right UNTIL THE BELL RINGS, and then let it go back. This turns down to a voting position all of the Pointers of the candidates of your party.

Turn back (up) the Pointer from over the name of the candidate you wish to cut. See illustration below.

And then turn down a Pointer over the name of the candidate you wish to vote for for that office. See illustration below.

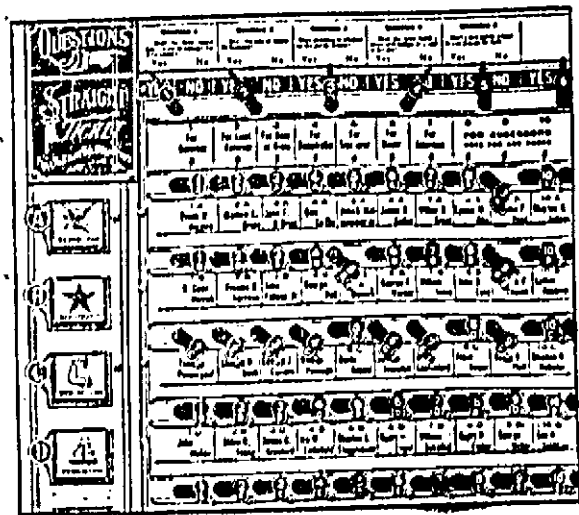

Be sure to complete each Split before making another. For an office to which two or more candidates are to be elected, the required number of candidates can be voted for, and no more, regardless of position.

After the vote is arranged, move the Red Handle of the Curtain Lever to the left as far as it will go. This will count one vote for every candidate that has a Pointer left down over his name.

HOW TO VOTE ON QUESTIONS.

To vote Yes, turn the Question Pointer to the word Yes, and leave it there. To vote No, turn the Question Pointer to the word No, and leave it there.

THE ABOVE CUT SHOWS:

That the voter has voted Party Lever "C" and then—Split his vote for Treasurer, on Column 5.

That he has voted for Assessors, voting for three on Column 4 (for which office he is permitted to vote for any three candidates on either of the Columns, 8, 9, and 10).

That he has voted "Yes" on Questions 1 and 2.

That he has not voted on Questions 3 and 5.

That he has voted "No" on Question 4.

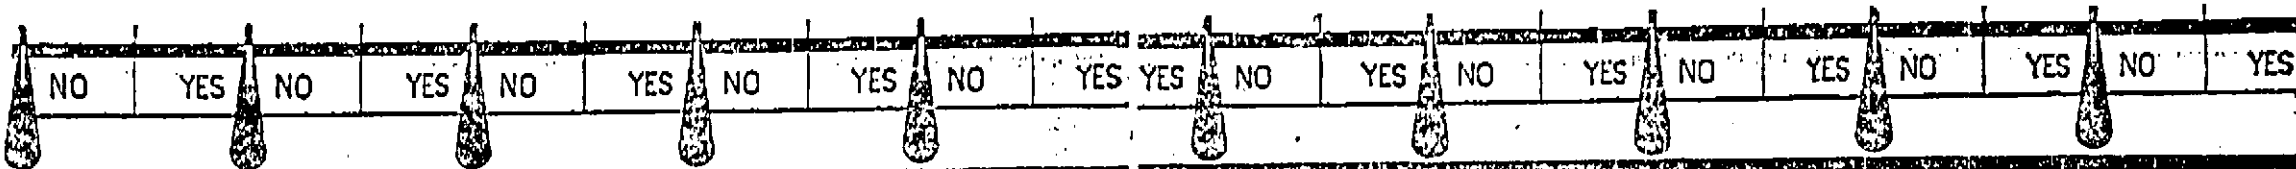

If the voter desires, he may make any further changes while the Curtain remains closed, as the vote is not registered until the Curtain is opened.

The Pointers must be left down over the names to be voted for. If the voter turns them back the vote will not be counted, as the opening of the Curtain turns back the Pointers and counts the vote.

MOONSHINE GAIN BY PROHIBITION

NUMBER OF ILLICIT STILLS INCREASED BY "DRY" VICTORIES, SAY OFFICERS.

THEY BLAME PROHIBITION

Revenue Men Tell of Great Growth of Liquor Making Since Anti-Saloon Element Has Been Victorious at the Polls.

Washington, Apr. 5.—The number of violations of the internal revenue laws concerning the distillation of whiskey have been increased by the "dry" victories of the prohibition element, especially in the south, according to officials of the department.

The records up to the first of last year did not show any very marked increase in the number of illicit distilleries destroyed or in the number of arrests made, but recent reports clearly indicate that in many of the southern states, and especially in Alabama, Georgia and North Carolina, there has been greater activity displayed on the part of the lawless mountain element, who always have been troublesome to the revenue agents, than in many years.

Blamed on "Dry" Laws.

This is accounted for by the fact that the legislatures of these three states have enacted laws prohibiting distilleries from operating within their borders. In Alabama the law went into effect on July 1, 1908; in Georgia on January 1, 1909, and in North Carolina on January 1, 1909. Very many of the legitimate distilleries have moved their plants to Florida and other border states, where the prohibition does not exist.

During the year 1908 there were 1,133 illicit stills destroyed; in 1907 there were 1,139, and in 1906 there were 1,370, but the returns for the nine months of the present fiscal year show a decided increase in the number destroyed, the number so far reported this year being 1,017, with the probability that by July 1 that number will have been increased to approximately 1,300.

120 Illicit Stills Seized.
The section of the south where there is the most activity among the so-called "moonshiners" embraces the Atlanta district, where it is reported 120 stills were seized and destroyed during the month of December last. The Asheville (N. C.) district is another that has to be constantly looked after, as does that of the Columbia (S. C.) and the Louisville (Ky.) districts.

The records of the last eight years show that the casualties to officers and men employed in raiding was only 11, four of the raiders having been killed. During this time about 6,700 persons were arrested and a large proportion of them sentenced to prison. One man has been killed.

Show What "Dry Town" Is.

Cincinnati, O., Apr. 5.—In order to impress upon the voters the dryness of a "dry town" all the saloonkeepers and liquor dealers of Ashland, Ky., several days ago closed up their saloons and turned the keys over to Mayor Mathewson, who is to keep them until after the local option election to be held in Lloyd county today. In addition they deposited $200 which is to be forfeited in case any one should be seen entering any saloon or liquor store of Ashland until after the election.

WOUND GIRLS IN CHURCH RIOT.
Fight to Oust Pastor Causes a Battle with Guns.

Denver, Col., Apr. 5.—Two little girls were injured in a fight between opposing sides made up of members of the German Evangelical church at Globeville, a suburb. A dozen shots were fired.

The girls, Lizzie Wotzel, aged eight, and Mary Wolf, aged 11, were struck by a charge fired from a shotgun, the police say, by Adam Jacoby, Jr. The trouble grew out of an attempt to oust Rev. Adam Trant, the pastor. Friday night the pastor stood guard behind the barred doors of his church to prevent the entrance of the faction opposing him.

Orders Prisoner to Des Moines.

Little Rock, Ark., Apr. 5.—On an order from United States Attorney General Wickersham John C. Mayhew, alleged leader of the "swindle syndicate" at Little Rock, was ordered to Des Moines, Ia. The order is believed to indicate a change of the plans of the federal authorities in dealing with the alleged swindle leader.

Vice-Admiral Cervera Dead.

Madrid, Apr. 5.—Vice-Admiral Cervera, commander of the Spanish fleet destroyed by Sampson and Schley at Santiago, died Saturday and was buried yesterday afternoon. The body was placed in a simple black coffin and borne on the shoulders of soldiers and blue jackets to the grave, where a salute of 21 volleys was fired.

De Saganas Expect an Heir.

Home Course In Modern Agriculture

XIII.—How Animals Grow

By C. V. GREGORY,

Agricultural Division, Iowa State College

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

ANIMALS, unlike plants, can obtain none of their food from the soil, air or water, but must have it prepared for them. Without plants there could be no animal life, since animals are dependent upon them, either directly or indirectly, for food. A study of the way animals make use of this food in building up their bodies will help us to better understand the principles of feeding.

There are three main constituents of foods—fats, carbohydrates and albuminoids, or protein. The fats are made up of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. The carbohydrates, of which starch and sugar are familiar examples, are made up of the same elements, but together in different proportions. Another of the carbohydrates is cellulose, or the woody fiber of plants. This is hard to digest, but some of it is used in animal growth. Albuminoids contain not only carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, but nitrogen also. In addition to these three constituents of food it also contains some mineral elements, which are commonly referred to as ash.

This ash is used in building up the bones, hair, horns and hoofs. The nitrogen is used in building up the muscles, nerves and various organs.

The fats and carbohydrates are used to furnish energy and heat. They are the fuel of the body, by uniting with oxygen they give off the heat and energy required to keep the body running. In much the same way that the elements of coal or wood unite with oxygen to furnish heat and power when burned in a steam engine. Not all of the fats and carbohydrates are burned immediately, however. Some of the fats go to build up fatty tissues. Some of the carbohydrates are changed to fats and used in the same way, and some are stored in the liver in the form of glycogen to be used when needed.

Before these various food elements can be used by the animal they must go through a process called digestion. The first step in digestion consists in taking the food into the mouth. Each class of animals has a different way of doing this. Watch the cows feeding in the pasture. They reach out their long tongues and gather in a mouthful of grass, breaking it off with a peculiar twist as it comes against their lower teeth. They cannot bite it off, since they have no upper teeth in front. The horse gathers in the grass with his lips and bites it off between his teeth. For this reason horses can eat grass down much closer to the ground than cattle can.

After the food is taken into the mouth it is chewed and mixed with saliva. This saliva serves two purposes—to moisten the food and to change some of the starch to sugar. This change is brought about by the action of enzymes which the saliva contains. These work in the same way as do the enzymes in a germ-killing seed, which prepare the food for the little plant.

Sugar and starch, as we have learned, are both composed of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, the only difference being that they are put together in a little different way. The action of the enzymes changes the relation of these elements in the starch, arranging them in such a manner as to form sugar.

All the starch in the food must be changed to some form of sugar before it can be used by the animal in building up the various parts of its body. Since the food remains in the mouth only a comparatively short time, however, only a small part of the starch can be acted upon there. The rest is changed later, as we shall see.

The main purpose of the saliva is to moisten the food. This moistening, together with the chewing, reduces it to a moist, finely divided mass, ready to be swallowed and acted upon by the other digestive juices.

While the essential processes of digestion are the same for all animals, the way in which the work is carried on varies somewhat. The horse and the hog have but one stomach. As the food enters this a churning motion begins, which gradually forces the partially digested mass along toward the lower end. The saliva continues to act on the starch, and another fluid, the gastric juice, is poured out from the walls of the stomach. The main duty of this gastric juice is to change the albuminoids into a form in which they can be absorbed and used by the animal.

Cattle and sheep have a very large stomach, which is divided into four parts. Animals of this kind are called ruminants. When the food is swallowed, it passes into the first stomach, which serves the purpose of a storehouse. Here the action of the saliva continues, and the water which the animal drinks softens the food to a considerable extent. After a time the food passes into the second stomach, which forces it back to the mouth, a little at a time. Here it is chewed thoroughly. You have often seen cows lying in the shade "chewing their cud." This cud is the food that has been sent up to the mouth by the second stomach.

After being chewed the food is swallowed again. This time it passes directly through the first stomach to the third. Here it becomes still further softened, finally passing into the fourth or true stomach. The function of the first three compartments is simply to prepare the food to be acted upon by the true stomach.

After leaving the stomach the partially digested food passes into the small intestines. Here it is acted upon by three fluids—the bile, pancreatic juice and intestinal juice. The chief use of the bile is to digest the fats, making them into a sort of a soapy fluid, in which form they are ready to be absorbed into the blood.

Both the pancreatic and intestinal juices act upon the remaining starch, completing the change into sugar. The pancreatic juice also completes the digestion of the albuminoids, in which work the intestinal juice may also take a small part. Another work of the pancreatic juice is to assist in decomposing the fats. The intestinal juice breaks down sugar up into simpler sugars, such as glucose.

After the food has been digested the usable portions are ready to be absorbed into the blood. Digestion has changed the fats, proteins and starches into a form in which they are soluble. In this fluid state they pass through the walls of the stomach and intestines and are emptied into the blood.

The blood is taken to all parts of the body by the arteries, which subdivide to form tiny capillaries. These are so small and close together that a pin prick on the skin anywhere will pierce some of them. There are two main parts to the blood—the fluid of plasma and the red corpuscles—which give it its color.

Each part of the body selects from the blood the food materials which it needs. Thus the bones will take ash, while the muscles will take protein, to build up their workman parts. The waste, broken down parts are burned, together with as much fat and sugar as are needed, to furnish heat and energy. All through the body there are thousands of little fires. To keep these fires going oxygen is used, and carbon dioxide is given off in the same way that a fire in a stove takes in oxygen through the lower draft and sends carbon dioxide up the chimney.

In the body the corpuscles supply the oxygen and carry away the carbon dioxide. The other waste materials, or ashes, are gathered up by a system of vessels called lymphatics, which empty into the veins. These veins carry the blood back to the heart. The change of the contents of the corpuscles from oxygen to carbon dioxide changes the color of the blood from a bright red to a much darker shade.

From the right side of the heart, to which the blood is brought by the veins, it is sent to the lungs, where the corpuscles exchange their carbon dioxide for oxygen and are ready for another trip through the body.

Since oxygen plays such an important part in keeping up the fires that supply the body with heat and energy, it is just as important that the animals be well supplied with fresh air as it is that they have enough food. In the winter especially the stables are often closed so tightly in the attempt to keep them warm that the air becomes very deficient in oxygen. In consequence the work of the body is delayed and the general health suffers. By having ventilators in the roof, together with plenty of windows at such a height that the draft will not blow directly upon the animals, fresh air can be admitted and impure air drawn off constantly.

Swearing in the new members of congress at the opening of the extra session in Washington last Monday. When congress convened in special session last Monday were sworn by states and new members in a body. This remarkable picture shows a full view of the house of representatives with a group of congressmen taking the oath in front of the speaker's desk. Probably the most prominent member of the lower house for the present session will be Francis E. Payne, chairman of the ways and means committee, whose name is attached to the new tariff bill which is destined to succeed in political history to the place occupied by the McKinley bill, the Wilson bill and the Dingley bill. Sereno Payne is marked in the picture No. 1.

Another interesting figure is that of Congressman McCall of Massachusetts, who is the third member of the ways and means committee and who was offered the presidency of Dartmouth college just prior to the opening of this session, but who refused for the sake of serving longer in the national congress. Congressman McCall is marked No. 2.

MADAME MODJESKA AND HER BEAUTIFUL HOME IN ORANGE COUNTY, CAL., WHERE SHE NOW LIES IN A CRITICAL CONDITION.

Madame Modjeska, who since 1876 has been playing almost continuously before American and English audiences, lies in her California home at the point of death. Recent reports state that she is greatly improved, but she is so run down as to give serious alarm to her intimate friends and her physician.

Madame Modjeska is 67 years old, of Polish birth and descent. She received a good education in a convent at Cracow, and soon after leaving the convent life she made her debut on the stage at Poznan, Poland, in a comedietta entitled "The White Camellia," when not 17 years of age. It was in 1876 when she made her first American appearance at San Francisco in "Adrienne Lecouvreur," and her London debut four years later in "Camille" under the title of "Henriette." The most important part of her artistic career was in Europe, but in regard to her success in this country Madame Modjeska says: "I consider my greatest boon to have been associated with Mr. Edwin Booth in 1880-90."

Her repertoire in this country has consisted of Shakespearean plays, of which she has played 14, together with "Mary Stuart of Schiller," "Camille," and "Adrienne Lecouvreur." Madame Modjeska belongs to several Catholic charity societies and to a number of women's organizations. She is a patron of the International Women's Council and an adopted daughter of the Golden West. In private life she is the wife of Count Potzenta Chalmersowska, whom she married in 1868.

Well-Deserved Criticism.

"A picture recently published in Munich shows that the peculiar vanity which manifests itself in a desire to be photographed often kills the sense of decency," says a writer in a Berlin paper. "The picture shows five uniformed men standing on the smoking platform of a building. In front of them, propped up against the debris, are eight mutilated corpses. Under the picture is this legend: 'The Indian coast has been infested for hundreds of years by Malaya pirates. Recently a body of Europeans, conducted by natives, pursued and captured one of these robber bands, whom they bound and cast into a pagoda, which they then blew up with dynamite.' The men who posed for a picture, in which they seemed to gloat over the dead, the fruit of which forms the previous foreground, were all Europeans."

Advancement in Illustration.

Up to 1879 no other methods were used for plates in fine art illustration than the engraving, and for blocks than wood engraving. Lithography scarcely entered into consideration, photographic reproduction was unknown. Etchings were out of fashion, and mezzotint was found unworkable for large numbers. Twenty years later, the engraving was practically a dead art, and wood engraving was rapidly becoming so. Reproduction based on photography developed, until color photography appears a possible method of actual book illustration.

DIAGRAM DETAILING THE CREEK INDIAN UPRISING IN OKLAHOMA.

No. 1 marks the location of Chief Crazy Snake's home, where the bodies of the first two men who were killed were found, and from which they were conveyed to Eufaula. No. 2 marks the present rendezvous of the Indian band. No. 3 indicates the militia marching on the Indians at Hickory Ground.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—The horrors of frontier days have again been experienced in the section of Oklahoma between the Canadian river and the North Canadian river. There is a vast difference, however, in the reality, for so far but little blood has been shed, although the inhabitants of Henryetta, Perote and the surrounding districts were in just as real danger as their fathers a generation ago were in the Indian wars.

Old Chief Crazy Snake and his band of Creek Indians and negro allies were determined to cause much trouble. They number nearly 200, and for over a month have been preparing for a war with the whites. Had it not been for Governor Haskell's prompt action in calling out the state militia, there is no doubt but that a terrible Indian massacre would have occurred, for the Indians outnumbered the white men of fighting age, two to one.

As it is, however, five troops of the state militia were assembled at Henryetta and promptly dispatched against the Indians, who were located in Hickory Ground. The Indians were holed up in a cave with ammunition enough to last a month, and in a guerrilla warfare could undoubtedly have held their own or at least killed off a considerable portion of the state troops. Owing to the lack of supplies, however, on the part of the colored men who have associated themselves with the Indians, they retreated across the North Canadian river to a point between the North Canadian river and Deep Fork creek. Here they are now located, and the troops are expected to clash with them hourly. If they hold to their warlike attitude there will be much bloodshed before they are captured or killed, for such is the determination of the militia.

The two men first killed were Marshall Baum of Checotah and Deputy Odum of Eufaula. The bodies of two officers were found in Chief Crazy Snake's home after he had left, and were taken to Eufaula. Sheriff Odum, father of Herman Odum, who was killed, is now leading the troops against the Indians, and he is out for revenge. Nothing but complete surrender or the annihilation of the entire warlike faction of the tribe will ever satisfy the state troops. This is the first uprising in many years, and will probably be the last.

THE MAN WITH THE POWER.
SENATOR NELSON W. ALDRICH OF RHODE ISLAND.

The one man upon whom more than any one else depends the question of whether a satisfactory tariff bill is quickly formulated by congress is Senator Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island. The Payne bill is the present topic of tariff discussion, but largely and principally because the constitution requires tariff legislation to originate in the house and Aldrich is in the senate. Senator Aldrich has already said that when the tariff legislation finally reaches the president it will be not in the form of the Payne bill, but in the form of the Aldrich bill.

Senator Aldrich is chairman of the senate committee on finance, the counterpart of the house committee on ways and means. In addition to being chairman of the committee on finance, Senator Aldrich is pretty much of the whole thing when it comes to tariff and influence on the program of the senate. He has been doing business in the senatorial wing of the capitol for a decade. He is the man who delivers the goods. He has never charged with untrustworthiness to corporate interests. He is always on the job.

If there is one man in the congress of the United States who will have more to say about the final form of the new tariff bill than any other man that individual is Nelson W. Aldrich.

No more affiliates for New York state. State Senator Harte introduces a bill in the state legislature which, if accepted, will settle the popularity of affiliates in New York state.

Albany, N. Y.—State Senator Demas Harte does not believe in affiliates, and has introduced a bill in the state legislature which if passed will practically put a stop to the increasing popularity of this form of lawlessness. Senator Harte holds from Adair, L. I., and it was at first thought his bill was a joke, but no man is more serious in his intention than is the Long Island senator.

"The idea of this bill," he said, "came to me after I had attended several sessions of the Harte trial at Flushing. I disapproved of the acquittal of the Harte, but I said to myself that if the law provided an adequate punishment for home wreckers, his hands would not have to take vengeance into their own hands. After I had thought the matter over I decided 20 years in prison was about the right punishment for the crime of home wrecking."

"Why not electrocution?" the senator was asked.

"I don't believe in capital punishment for anything," was Senator Harte's reply. "I believe men and women should be punished equally for the offense. If my bill becomes a law the women will serve time as well as the men."

"I believe in an equal moral standard and an equal punishment for men and women. Too often the poor woman hangs her head in shame while the man stalks away from the scene of his crime, feeling even bigger than he did before."

SCIENCE AND INVENTION

HANDY CORD-HOLDER FOR HARVESTING FRUIT

Attached to Body, and String Is Always Within Reach.

The butcher, the laborer and the candlestick maker, not to speak of scores of other tradespeople who have packages to tie up, will find a great convenience in the cordholder invented by an Ohio man. It will save them much time and annoyance and by its aid they will be able to do up a better bundle. This holder consists of a curved wooden bar, made to fit around the waist, from which there projects a string to hold a cord or ball of twine. A strong curved wire rises above the twine ball with a circular loop at the end for the string to pass through.

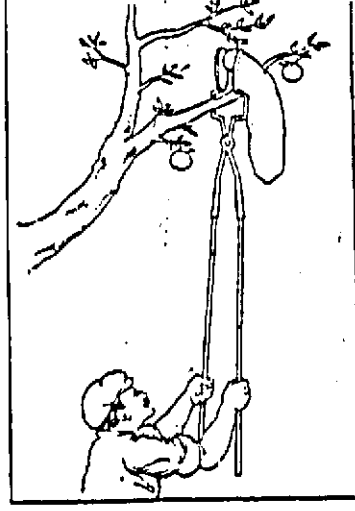

TWINE NEVER MISLAIN.

It is also equipped with a ball-like arrangement on which the cord can be cut when it is time to tie the knot. The supporting bar is affixed to a sort of light harness which fits over the shoulders and around the body and holds it in place. Thus, any person who has many packages to tie up in the course of the day can have his ball of twine always at hand and will be able to do the work much more easily and rapidly.

APPLES CAN BE PLUCKED FROM POINTE. Usually Out of Reach.

Farmers and other persons with fruit orchards will find much to commend in the invention of an Indiana man which makes the gathering of apples, pears and peaches a far easier and quicker proposition than it has been heretofore. This invention is simple enough, but like many other simple expedients, it remained unthought of until recently. The contrivance used is of metal, made on the principle of a pair of scissors, except that where the point of the scissors would come there is on one side a disc and on the other a circular aperture opening

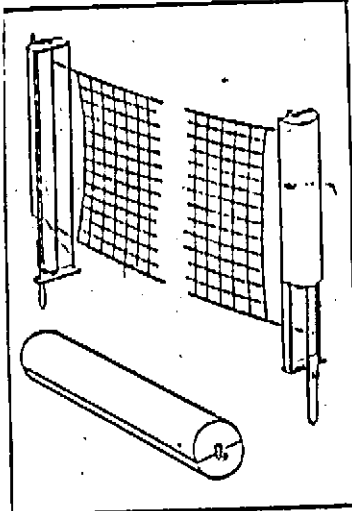

FRUIT DROPS INTO BAG.

Into a long bag, which is attached to it. The handles of the harvester are hollow, so that they will fit over the pointed ends of poles, which may be of any length required. By means of this device a person standing on the ground can reach fruit in otherwise inaccessible places, and by compressing the handles can slip the fruit from the limbs into the bag. In this way fruit can be picked before it falls to the ground and becomes bruised.

USEFUL TENNIS POSTS

Each Forms Half of Receptacle to Hold the Net.

Tennis posts that will do double duty and obviate the necessity of taking the net in over night have been invented by a Pennsylvania man. Each post resembles a large metal tube, bleeted. At the bottom of each is a long spike and inside is a rod which turns like a reel. These ends of the net are fastened to them. When in position the posts stand firm and hold the net fast during hard usage, and when the games are over one of the posts can be pulled from the ground and the net rolled up inside the other. When the two posts are brought together they make a round, waterproof case for the net, which can be left outdoors not only over night, but in the severest weather. Another advantage of such a device is that the court can be laid out wherever desired, as the posts need only be pressed into the ground. Any person who has had a costly tennis set ruined by moisture when it was forgotten and left out in the rain will appreciate the merits of this invention.

ROOF-CLIMBING SAFE

Spiked Guards Prevent Workmen From Falling to Ground.

For the safety of workmen and second-story burglars a Canadian has put a roof-climber on that market that is warranted to keep the worker from breaking his neck. To men whose business it is to climb roofs such a device is of great value, for the casualties in this trade are numerous and often fatal. The device consists of a padded plate, curved device

verely along its longer dimensions and equipped with spikes at top and bottom and straps to bind it fast to the worker's leg. One strap buckles above the calf and the other goes under the foot and keeps the man from slipping. Equipped with one of these "climbers" the stinger can move with ease to different parts of the roof on which he may be at work without fear of falling. As he lies on one side, holding the shingles fast, the spikes, which are worn toward the side of the leg, become imbedded in the wood and give him a firm position.

ELECTION NOTICE

OFFICE OF COUNTY CLERK, March 23, 1909.

To the Electors of Rock County:
 Notice is hereby given that a judicial and schools election is to be held in the several towns, wards and election precincts in the County of Rock, on the 6th day of April, 1909, at which the officers named below are to be chosen. The name of the candidate for each office to be voted for, whose nominations have been certified to this office, are given opposite the title of the office and under the appropriate party or other designation, each in its proper column, and the questions submitted to vote are stated below:

INFORMATION TO VOTERS

The following instructions are given for the information and guidance of voters: A voter upon entering the polling place, and giving his name and residence, will receive a ballot from the ballot clerk, which must have endorsed thereon the names or initials of both ballot clerks, and no other ballot can be used. Upon receiving his ballot, the voter must retire alone to a booth or compartment, and prepare the same for voting. A ballot clerk may inform the voter as to the proper manner of marking a ballot, but he must not advise or indicate in any manner whom to vote for. If a voter wishes to vote for some of the candidates of different political parties, he should make a cross to mark under the name of each candidate for a certain office, whose name is not on the ballot, he must write the name in the blank space under the printed name of the candidate for the office. The ballot should not be marked in any other manner. If the ballot is spoiled it must be returned to the ballot clerk, who must issue another in its stead, but not more than three in all to any one voter. Five minutes' time is allowed in booth to mark ballot. Official ballots or memorandum to assist the voter in marking his ballot can be taken into the booth and may be used to copy from. The ballot must not be shown so that any person can see how it has been marked by the voter. After it is marked it should be folded so that the inside cannot be seen, but so that the printed endorsements and signatures of the ballot clerk on the outside may be seen. Then the voter should pass out of the booth, or compartment, give his name to the inspector in charge of the ballot box and hand him his ballot to be placed in the box and put out of the voting place. A voter who declares to the presiding officer that he is unable to read, or that by reason of physical disability he is unable to mark his ballot, can have assistance, of one or two election officers in marking the same, to be chosen by the voter, and if he declares that he is totally blind he may be assisted by any person chosen by him from among the legal voters of the county. The presiding officer may administer an oath, in his discretion, as to such person's disability. The party designations and candidates for the different offices are, for example, as follows:

SHOUT!

This is not an age of meek advertising. A single announcement of the fact that you are still doing business on earth is not apt to create a stampede among prospective buyers. You have to shout your wares long and loud if you want to get business. You also have to make your advertising effective if you want it to be seen and read. "A man may have the best goods in the world, but if you want everybody to hear of them you must SHOUT, and often it is not the man who talks best that wins most, it's the man who talks loudest.

So it is with catalogues, booklets, folders, letter heads. No matter how attractive your offer or how well presented if the "Printing" is not attractive, or strong enough to get attention, if it is not tempting to compel people to read it, your efforts and your money are wasted.

Our Printing Department is equipped with modern facilities, for the printing of one, two and three color work. Every piece of machinery, all type and furniture is up-to-date. Not one thing in the entire department is old or thrashy.

We enter to good printing only and for the service we render, our prices are very reasonable.

TALKS OF WORK DONE BY CHURCH

WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED
BY EPISCOPAL MISSIONARIES.

TELLS OF ALASKA COUNTRY

Vast Country to the North Whose Interior is but Sparingly Settled.

Like the people of the time of Secretary Howard who criticized his action in bringing about the purchase of Alaska by the United States, the Americans of today have very hazy ideas in regard to the vast character of the great country, and those who had the good fortune to listen to the description of the work of the Episcopal church in Alaska given by Rev.
H. W. Adams at Trinity Church last night came away with a much clearer impression of that vast expanse of snow and ice than any magazine article could convey. The man who devotes his life to the land that others may be benefited sees much more than the mere outside of things, and it was in his description of Alaska that the priest presented to the hearers.

In introducing his subject, which was the work done by the missionaries of the Episcopal Church in Alaska, the speaker first gave some idea of the country, its varieties of climate,
how the mild weather of the S. W.
Coast differed from the desolate interior, the ever-shifting population, and how, had it not been for the discovery of gold, only a small portion of the country, and that along the coast, would ever have been settled.
It is a common mistake fostered by the articles of those who have toured the country only through the main-traveled roads that Alaska is all like that portion bordering on the Pacific.
This impression is entirely erroneous,
for the interior is desolate and cold beyond the imaginations of those who have never experienced an Alaskan winter in the interior, with the thermometer 70 and 80 degrees below zero.

Rev. Rice's parish, with headquarters at Circle City, the oldest mining camp in the north, comprises a terribly greater than the state of Wisconsin. Circle City is known as a poor man's camp for the reason that prospectors who have failed to strike it rich at some other place come back to get enough there at ten or twelve dollars a day to stake them for the next rush. At times the population reaches twelve or fifteen hundred, but when gold is found in a new place
the entire camp is almost deserted.
During the winter for almost eight months the town is entirely shut in from the rest of the world and the population forced to depend on their own resources for food. Contrary to the usual impression the miners who live there do not entirely forget their religion, but turn to it more readily than they would in the states. The difficult situation seems to exert a facilitation over them and men who have not been to church for twenty or thirty years again attend services. When spring comes, however, the congregations begin to thin out, and the missionary is forced to follow the rushes as they are called in order to keep in touch with his congregation. It was one of these rushes in the wake of a rush to Fairbanks from Circle, that Rev. Rice described the toll and suffering of the miners on their tollone journey rewarded by the news that the rumor of gold was false when they reached their destination. It was at Fairbanks with its four buildings, two saloons, a store and a dwelling, that the missionary held services in as strange a place as the work of God was ever read, for the saloon was used as a church, boxes for a pulpit, while the saloon-keeper drove the gamblers from the adjoining rooms to hear the services in order that the noise might not disturb the minister.
Even the light no longer attracted them to draw away the worshippers.

From his description of this unique service, Rev. Rice went on to describe the good work done in the hospitals, a work that has done more than any other one thing to give the Episcopal church a good name among the laborers of that frozen country. People who live in the states among all the inconveniences of hospitals and doctors can not imagine what it is to be in a country where a journey of a couple of hundred miles is necessary in order to reach a doctor or even get medicine. The missionary then described several terrible trips that he made with a dog team to succor some injured miner. It was necessary for the injured man to travel as far as five hundred miles on a dog sled, suffering terrible pain, before he could reach a military post and obtain medical assistance.

After giving some idea of the hardships endured by both missionary and the miner, the priest described the work of the church among the Indians whom the government neglects entirely. They resent the teachings of Christ with all their soul, and their religion becomes the dominant feature of a life that measured with our standards is almost unendurable.
They come as far as twenty or thirty miles for the sole purpose of listening to the service, and show the greatest eagerness to get the necessary books, so that they may read the service to their own people. Their devotion is about all that inspires the four clergy, who must cover a country one-sixth as large as the whole United States, with sufficient enthusiasm to keep up their work. Even if they do not appreciate the material things done for them, their gratitude for the spiritual help is without restraint.

OLD SETTLER DIES
AT MILTON JUNCTION

Michael Miso, Veteran of Mexican War and Aged Resident of County,
Passed Away Sunday.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milton Junction, April 5.—Michael Miso died at his home about two miles west of this village Sunday morning at 8:30. Mr. Miso was born in the Province of Quebec, Canada, Feb. 2, 1823, and came to Wisconsin in 1845. At the opening of the Mexican war he enlisted in the Regular 6th regiment and served all through the war. In 1852 he settled on a farm two miles west of this village, and has since made that his home. Funeral services will be held at the home at 1:30 and at the Methodist church in Milton at 2:30, Wednesday, April 7.

MR. AND MRS. HELMS
HOME FROM ARIZONA

Set Out Two And a Half Acres of Orange Trees on Their Tract Near Phoenix Before Departure.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Helms returned Friday evening from Arizona
where they have been sojourning since last November. Two and a half acres of the ten acre tract, located about six miles from Phoenix, were set out with orange trees just before their departure and in the course of three or four years the grove will be in bearing. Just now the young trees are being brought from the California and Florida nurseries and inasmuch as the supply does not equal the demand, command
very high prices.

Mr. Helms is very enthusiastic over the future of the Salt River valley. The Roosevelt dam, which will be built at a cost of $6,000,000, will hold in reserve for irrigation purposes a water from 25 to 30 miles long and 200 feet deep. This will be sufficient to irrigate all of the entire valley for three years without any rainfall and ought to be equal to all needs as the dry-years are only semi-occasional. The government is in complete control of the water supply, canals, and feeders, and by an annual assessment on the farmers of $3 an acre for a period of ten years the whole enterprise can be paid for. However, the water power will also be sold and this will make it possible to materially decrease the tax.

Land values are appreciating rapidly. The owner of an orange grove which sold for $2,500 two years ago talked with H. D. Lewis of this city, about selling it for $10,000 and then withdrew his offer for fear it would be taken up, says Mr. Helms.
Just now the agriculturists are devoting their attention almost exclusively to oranges, lemons, grapefruit, and alfalfa, but eventually olives and English walnuts and the other semi-tropical fruits and nuts will be grown there. Mr. Helms' tract is located near ranches owned by his mother-in-law, Mrs. M. A. Libby, and her son, L. D. Libby.

FEED YOUR MONEY
Feed Your Brain and It Will Feed You
Money and Fame.

"Ever since boyhood I have been especially fond of meats, and I am convinced I ate too rapidly, and failed to masticate my food properly.
"The result was that I found myself,
a few years ago, afflicted with ailments of the stomach and kidneys, which interfered seriously with my business.
"At last I took the advice of friends and began to eat Grape-Nuts instead of the heavy meats, etc., that had constituted my former diet.
"I found that I was at once benefited
by the change, that I was soon relieved from the heart-burn and the indigestion that used to follow my meals, that the pains in my back had ceased entirely.
"The nerves which used to be insensitive, and my brain, which was slow and lethargic from a heavy diet of meats and grossy foods, had gradually,
but none the less surely, been restored to normal efficiency.
"Now every nerve is steady and my brain and thinking faculties are quicker and more accurate than for years past.
"After my old style breakfasts I used to suffer, during the forenoon from a feeling of weakness which hindered me seriously in my work, but since I have begun to use Grape-Nuts food I can work till dinner time with all ease and comfort." There's a Lesson.

RIVER GIVES UP
TOM M'LAUGHLIN

BODY RECOVERED BACK OF AMERPHON GREENHOUSE.

PULLED IN BY FISH-LINE

In Hands of George Jacobson at Half Past Six O'Clock This Morning
—Was Drowned Jan. 22.

Back of Edward Amerphn's greenhouse, 334 South Main street, at half past six o'clock this morning, George Jacobson, an employee of the Janesville Floral Co., pulled and yanked a long fish-line which has become entangled with some supposed snag on the bottom of the river about three rods from the bank, and presently brought to the shore-line a gruesome object calculated to give a most over-tempered fisherman the shudders. It was the body of a dead man, covered with river slime and oozing, and might easily have been mistaken at a little distance for a mere bundle of mud-soaked garments. Though the face had suffered much by long ex-posure, it was subsequently found that the body was not bloated and was in a good state of preservation.
Chief of Police George Appleby and Officers Peter Champion and Patrick Fanning, who went to the scene with the patrol wagon in response to Mr.
Jacobson's summons, had no difficulty in recognizing the corpse as that of Thomas M'Laughlin, aged 30, who disappeared in a mysterious fashion, while a heavy fog enveloped the city, during the early evening of Friday, January 22.

No Signs of Violence.
So far as could be determined by a rather thorough examination of the river bank, there was no evidence, however, of death by violence. The pockets of the clothes yielded a purse containing three silver dollars and seven pennies, a pearl-handled jackknife, and a receipt for $5.00 made out to Thomas M'Laughlin by R. W.
Edson, founder further directions from the city authorities and relatives the remains were taken to Nelson's undertaking room.

Was Nearly Blind.
Contemporaneous, as it was, with the excitement caused by the brutal murder of Michael Cronin, another aged man, the disappearance of Thomas M'Laughlin was for a time
the subject of many wild conjectures.
But as time went on and all the facts regarding the case were learned, it came to be the settled conviction that the man had simply fallen into the river; that he had been on a foul day, and that he had lost the use of one eye and the sight of the other was failing. He left his home across the railroad tracks on St.
Mary's avenue on the morning of January 22 and went down town to get some bread, promising to return before noon. He was supposed to have started out with about $30 in money on his person. At twelve o'clock that day he was seen sitting on the curb in front of the storage warehouse on West street and was apparently ill at the time. To his wife, who was in the afternoon
Office Peter Champion and Janitor James Gilespie saw him pass by the may plead

more eloquently

for goods than the goods can speak for themselves, yet in a legitimate way. Here is a curious incident that illustrates the point. It happened to a man who is himself in the advertising business, and for the necessity of it we will vouch:

This man read an advertisement exploiting a certain factory in a current paper. The article appeared so interesting that the man went to a news-stand and bought the paper. To his surprise and amusement, he found that he had previously bought the same paper, run through it, and passed by the special article in question, without its having attracted him enough to read it. Yet, upon reading it, proved to be what the advertisement claimed.
The deduction seems to be the Essence that: In a busy world it is not enough for a commercial product to be good; its goodness must be pointed out by whatever parties are interested. A virtue that is not advertised has to be its own reward.
Virtue that is advertised is, as the Greeks used to say, "unconquerable in strife."

most everybody interested.

COURT DECIDES CHURCH CASE.

Cumberland Presbyterians Are Victors in Tennessee Legal Fight.

Nashville, Tenn., Apr. 5.—The Cumberland Presbyterian church in Tennessee Saturday afternoon won the noted church case with which the Tennessee supreme court has been wrestling for two years. The supreme court in an opinion of 91 pages, delivered by Justice M. M. Neil, holds that the steps sought to be taken by a portion of the Cumberland Presbyterian church in uniting with the Presbyterian church, U. S. A., were not of force.

It was held that Cumberland church still exists and that its members retain its creed, doctrines, etc. It was held that the unionists had allied themselves with another, different church and doctrine.

LEAPS INTO NIAGARA FALLS.

Unidentified Man Commits Suicide at Luna Island.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Apr. 5.—An unidentified man about thirty-eight years old yesterday committed suicide by jumping into the river from Luna island, in sight of a score of persons, who saw him swoon over the falls.

He stood on the railing of the bridge for a second or two peering down into the water and then dove in head foremost. He was described as an unusually handsome man weighing about 180 pounds, with black hair and mustache.

The authorities hope to establish his identity by means of a child's ring found in one of the pockets of the overcoat which he left on the bridge. Luna fall has never given up its dead.

Howlich cannot live. Folk Melchior was stabbed but not fatally.

Both Brady and Melchior are hiding in the hills and defy officers. All the injured men are Austrians.

Teach Miners Life Saving.

Washington, Apr. 5.—Four stations for the training of miners in rescue work have been established recently by the big coal companies of the country, as the result of demonstrations made by the United States geological survey at its station in Pittsburgh and its substation at Urbana, Ill., and the experiments to be made will have the effect of decreasing the loss of life in mine disasters. The stations are at Connelville, Pa., Fairmont, W. Va., Marianna, Pa., and Zolger, Ill.

TARIFF VOTE DAY FIXED.

House Committee on Rules Makes Its Recommendations.

Washington, Apr. 5.—The rules committee of the house today brought in a rule fixing the time for taking the final vote on the tariff bill and restricting amendments thereto.

The rule sets the date for April 10 and protects the measure, it is said, from all amendments except those recommended by the ways and means committee and those offered on the floor of the house that will give an opportunity for a vote on the question of free lumber, protected barley and protected hides.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon, speaker of the house, was ill at his home with a bad cold yesterday, and a physician was called to attend him. The speaker was at the capitol today, however.

Marquis, the other occupant of the machine, both of New York. Lindow's neck was broken.

THE LAST VOYAGE of the DONNA ISABEL

By Randall Parrish

Author of "The Hampton of Flowers," etc.

Illustrations by Dearborn Melville

There was a fierce storm of onths, the faces of the men wolfish and savage as they glared down into the water; but Kelly fell on his knees and began to pray.

It almost seems to me that this was the last, though it could not have been. There were hours after that, perhaps even days and nights, when I lived without really knowing that I lived. It was a period of fancies, phantasms, dreams, weird and fantastic, haunting horrors that left all reality blank. I know that Johnson helped me at the tiller while De Nova lay prone in the bottom of the boat, sometimes talking to himself, occasionally lifting his head to peer over the side. What he said had no meaning, just a jumble of French words, and he smiled like that dead Spaniard in the cabin of the Donna Isabel.

I know that Sanchez, who had bravely done all he could in spite of his broken leg, fell into the delirium of fever, screaming for hours that he was dying, and had at last to be bound fast in his blankets. I know Kelly came creeping aft with a knife in his hand, imagining he had been robbed, and I had to knock him flat with the tiller-bar, the boat falling off into the trough of the sea and nearly capsizing before I could get her head about again. Doris was bending over Sanchez, who seemed to have an interval of sanity at the moment—that was the last I remember; then, I think, I pitched over against Doris when she came back to me, and everything went dark.

CHAPTER XXX.

In Which We Come to the End.

I was lying between white sheets in a rather wide berth when I came again to consciousness, a yellow glow of sunlight streaming in through an open port, and the clanking sound of machinery in my ears. I closed my eyes again, wearily, my head reeling yet from the delusions of the past. No, this was real—a steamer, rising and falling on the swell, but pushing steadily forward to the rapid revolutions of the screw. I could hear the tramping of feet on deck, even the splash of the sea without. I opened my eyes again, watching a curtain wave to the fresh air rushing in through the port, and then I turned my head on the pillow. Doris sat on a low stool gazing out through the aperture on the sea, her face partially turned away. She looked pale, careworn, her eyes heavy and sad. Suddenly she turned her glance in my direction, and sprang up with a glad cry.

"Oh, Jack, you have been lying there so long unconscious!"

I could only clasp her hands and gaze into the depths of her gray eyes. "I have proved rather a poor specimen of a man, I fear, dear," I confessed at last, ashamed of my weakness. "How long?"

"It is three days since we were brought on board, and we were a day and night in the boat after you lost consciousness."

I endeavored to think it out, to comprehend. She leaned farther over, her lips touching my cheek.

"Don't worry about it, Jack; everything is all right now. Johnson took your place at the tiller, and—and we were picked up."

"What vessel is this?"

"The El Cid, Valparaiso to Buenos Ayres—a coast-trader."

"And the others? Do they live?"

"All but Sanchez; he died the night after our rescue. Kelly is half-crazed yet, but they think he will get over it. De Nova was very badly frozen, but Celeste was out on deck yesterday."

I lay there looking at her, striving valiantly to put all these horrors away, and to face the present and the future. My handclasp tightened, for I could no longer keep back the one question which trembled on my lips.

"But you, Doris, you! Do you still mean what you said yesterday? Are we only saved to lose each other? Have you heard? Do you know anything of him?"

The red blood flooded the pale cheeks, the long lashes veiling the gray eyes.

"Oh, not now; don't speak of that now."

"But I must, I cannot wait in suspense," I insisted, lifting myself on the pillow. "You have heard—tell me."

"I have been a coward," she faltered. "I have not asked; I have not even told my name to those on board. I was afraid the knowledge might place all under arrest; besides, I wanted to nurse you."

I looked at her, my heart falling, my voice trembling as I spoke.

"But—but are you going to—England?"

"Yes."

"When?"

There was a long pause, in which I heard her rapid breathing.

"They—they tell me I can get passage on an English vessel, the Albatross, within a few days after we reach Buenos Ayres."

Her hand, tightened, on mine, and who dropped to her knees, her face buried in the coverlet.

I fought the devil in me like a man, my hands clenched, my teeth set fiercely, but it was a while before I could control my voice sufficiently for reply. She did not lift her head, and as I continued to gaze at her my heart throbbled with a love which became sacrifice.

"Doris," I managed to whisper at last, "whatever you believe to be right I will think right also. Only let me be alone for a little while—just a little while, until I can fight this out and conquer."

She lifted her head, her hand on my hair, her gray eyes looking frankly into mine.

"I—I thank you, Jack," she smiled tremblingly. The next moment I was alone.

While I was sitting up and partially dressed that evening, Marsden, the chief mate, came in and told me briefly the story of our rescue.

"We were considerably to the west of our course," he said, gravely, "because we had met headwinds and a heavy sea all the way down the coast. It was just at daybreak when we sighted your boat in longitude 75 degrees west and latitude 53 degrees, 17 minutes south. I've been knocking about at sea for 23 years, Mr. Stephens, but I never saw a more pitiful sight than that longboat presented when we got up alongside. The jib held, but the mainsail was in tatters, and for a minute or two I didn't think there was a living soul aboard. There was a man forward lashed down with ropes, dead; a man and a woman were wrapped up in blankets amidships, leaning against each other, their eyes closed. Close up to the stern another woman was lying with her arms about your neck and hiding your face."

"Doris, with her arms about me!" I thought. How well I knew the desperation that could lead her to the embrace she had ever refused me! Marsden went on:

"A big fellow held to the tiller as if he was frozen there, but he'd dropped down until his head hung dangling as the boat rocked. There wasn't one of them took any notice of us until we were fairly alongside. 'Then this big sailor lifted his head and stared dull-eyed like he thought he saw a vision, and when I spoke to him the woman that had her arms about you started, gave her knees and began to cry. Good Lord, sir, but it made my heart ache, and I never saw so much misery in any human face before. Well, we fell to, and got you all on the El Cid, hoisted the whole outfit over the rail, and, barring the dead man, I reckon you're all good for a spell of life yet."

"They told you our story?"

"Yes—most of it, anyway; and I understand all right what it was did you up so. It wasn't hunger or cold, but just the loneliness 'at strain."

I looked away from him, out through the open port at the gray vista of sea.

"That was it, Mr. Marsden," I said, my voice shaking to the memory of it. "It was the hell of the great ocean—it broke our hearts."

As the El Cid coast on her way up the Patagonian coast my strength came rapidly back, and I soon found my way on deck, where, wrapped against the chill of the wind, I passed much time talking with Doris, seeing De Nova and Kelly now and then. Celeste was often with us, her eyes rough as ever, but her face thin and white. Once, when we chanced to be left alone together, I undertook to question the girl.

"What is the matter between you and De Nova, Celeste? Have you two fallen out?"

She tossed her head, flashing her eyes at me.

"I not know we ever fall in," she said, pouting prettily. "He ver' nice for a sailor, but why do I want a sailor? I want to see no more ever."

Winchester, Va., Apr. 5.—Miss Virginia Carter, daughter of Thomas B. Carter, was burned to death yesterday in a fire which destroyed her home, "Yellow House," one of the most historic structures in the state. Both Mr. and Mrs. Carter were badly burned in a futile effort to save their daughter. They are expected to recover.

"Yellow House" was more than two hundred years old and was the scene of many notable events during revolutionary and civil war times. Gen. George Washington stopped there while on his way to Braddock's relief at Fort Duquesne, and during the conflict between the states it was the home of Miss Rachel Wright, whose information to Gen. Sheridan was of such value to the federal army during the valley campaign that congress voted her a gold medal in appreciation of her services. The origin of the fire which destroyed this historic pile is unknown.

Sets Law of Kitchen. A "law of the kitchen" has been set forth in England in an opinion by a county judge. He holds that where the mistress of a house goes to the kitchen to add the maid of all work the two are brought on terms of equality such as would not be tolerated in larger establishments. The case was that of a cook and general maid who sought to recover a month's wages from her former mistress in lieu of notice. The mistress asserted that the servant always "answered her back," but the judge held that under the circumstances this was not sufficient to justify dismissal.

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and sure enough I was cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. Williams, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 89, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ill health, creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake, as well as those you love, give it a trial.

BOYS SMOKE CIGARETTES; START $2,000,000 FIRE

One Man Dead and 300 Families Homeless After Flames Sweep Fort Worth.

Fort Worth, Tex., Apr. 5.—A large section of this city is in ashes today as the result of cigarette smoking by boys. The fire started Saturday morning in South Fort Worth, destroyed property worth $2,000,000, caused the death of one person, J. J. Newton, a bank employe, the serious injury of six others, rendered 300 families homeless and will cause the temporary idleness of several hundred workers employed in the manufacturing plants and business houses burned.

The burned district is under the guard of state troops to prevent looting and although worn out by their continuous labors, the entire fire fighting force of the city is still engaged in extinguishing the burning embers, which with the wind still high, apommodately spring into a blaze.

The fire started at May and Tucker streets. Driven by a gale, blowing from the southwest the flames quickly spread to adjoining buildings, quick to ignite because of the extreme dryness of the wood following a protracted drought, and within a few moments the conflagration was beyond all control. Spectacular in the extreme, the flames would leap from building to building, across broad avenues and at times for a block at a time, the rapidity of the fire's progress rendering impossible the removal of household effects.

Some of the city's handsomest homes were destroyed and great treasures were soon in flames. The Texas & Pacific Railway Company is one of the heaviest losers. Twenty locomotives and hundreds of cars were burned.

Newark, N. J., Apr. 5.—Fire partly ruined the large grain elevator and storage warehouse, of the Wilkinson-Gaddis Company, wholesale grocers, yesterday. The loss is estimated to be $125,000.

GIRL BURNS IN "YELLOW HOUSE."

Historic Virginia Residence Is Destroyed by Flames.

Winchester, Va., Apr. 5.—Miss Virginia Carter, daughter of Thomas B. Carter, was burned to death yesterday in a fire which destroyed her home, "Yellow House," one of the most historic structures in the state. Both Mr. and Mrs. Carter were badly burned in a futile effort to save their daughter. They are expected to recover.

"Yellow House" was more than two hundred years old and was the scene of many notable events during revolutionary and civil war times. Gen. George Washington stopped there while on his way to Braddock's relief at Fort Duquesne, and during the conflict between the states it was the home of Miss Rachel Wright, whose information to Gen. Sheridan was of such value to the federal army during the valley campaign that congress voted her a gold medal in appreciation of her services. The origin of the fire which destroyed this historic pile is unknown.

Sets Law of Kitchen. A "law of the kitchen" has been set forth in England in an opinion by a county judge. He holds that where the mistress of a house goes to the kitchen to add the maid of all work the two are brought on terms of equality such as would not be tolerated in larger establishments. The case was that of a cook and general maid who sought to recover a month's wages from her former mistress in lieu of notice. The mistress asserted that the servant always "answered her back," but the judge held that under the circumstances this was not sufficient to justify dismissal.

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and sure enough I was cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. Williams, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 89, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ill health, creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake, as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham writes to Lynn, Mass., ladies all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Her hand, tightened, on mine, and

who dropped to her knees, her face buried in the coverlet.

I fought the devil in me like a man, my hands clenched, my teeth set fiercely, but it was a while before I could control my voice sufficiently for reply. She did not lift her head, and as I continued to gaze at her my heart throbbled with a love which became sacrifice.

"Doris," I managed to whisper at last, "whatever you believe to be right I will think right also. Only let me be alone for a little while—just a little while, until I can fight this out and conquer."

She lifted her head, her hand on my hair, her gray eyes looking frankly into mine.

"I—I thank you, Jack," she smiled tremblingly. The next moment I was alone.

While I was sitting up and partially dressed that evening, Marsden, the chief mate, came in and told me briefly the story of our rescue.

"We were considerably to the west of our course," he said, gravely, "because we had met headwinds and a heavy sea all the way down the coast. It was just at daybreak when we sighted your boat in longitude 75 degrees west and latitude 53 degrees, 17 minutes south. I've been knocking about at sea for 23 years, Mr. Stephens, but I never saw a more pitiful sight than that longboat presented when we got up alongside. The jib held, but the mainsail was in tatters, and for a minute or two I didn't think there was a living soul aboard. There was a man forward lashed down with ropes, dead; a man and a woman were wrapped up in blankets amidships, leaning against each other, their eyes closed. Close up to the stern another woman was lying with her arms about your neck and hiding your face."

"Doris, with her arms about me!" I thought. How well I knew the desperation that could lead her to the embrace she had ever refused me! Marsden went on:

"A big fellow held to the tiller as if he was frozen there, but he'd dropped down until his head hung dangling as the boat rocked. There wasn't one of them took any notice of us until we were fairly alongside. 'Then this big sailor lifted his head and stared dull-eyed like he thought he saw a vision, and when I spoke to him the woman that had her arms about you started, gave her knees and began to cry. Good Lord, sir, but it made my heart ache, and I never saw so much misery in any human face before. Well, we fell to, and got you all on the El Cid, hoisted the whole outfit over the rail, and, barring the dead man, I reckon you're all good for a spell of life yet."

"They told you our story?"

"Yes—most of it, anyway; and I understand all right what it was did you up so. It wasn't hunger or cold, but just the loneliness 'at strain."

I looked away from him, out through the open port at the gray vista of sea.

"That was it, Mr. Marsden," I said, my voice shaking to the memory of it. "It was the hell of the great ocean—it broke our hearts."

As the El Cid coast on her way up the Patagonian coast my strength came rapidly back, and I soon found my way on deck, where, wrapped against the chill of the wind, I passed much time talking with Doris, seeing De Nova and Kelly now and then. Celeste was often with us, her eyes rough as ever, but her face thin and white. Once, when we chanced to be left alone together, I undertook to question the girl.

"What is the matter between you and De Nova, Celeste? Have you two fallen out?"

She tossed her head, flashing her eyes at me.

"I not know we ever fall in," she said, pouting prettily. "He ver' nice for a sailor, but why do I want a sailor? I want to see no more ever."
